we found ourselves on the streets helpless. I went to the magistrate's and found he was from Szechuan. He found a lodging for us, and arranged for our journey. When watching the city gate made trouble when we entered the city. My room was vermin ridden with fleas.
One helper nearly raised a riot by unwise words while the roads were on the street and I was seeing the magistrate.

日五初月六歷陰

Travelled about 20 miles, secured some fine insects. I forgot it was Sunday, & rather thought tomorrow was. Wild boar and a deer were seen across the river, and mountain goats or wild goats. Finally we saw three wild goats across the river, I raised the sights the first twice, but overshot. Then lowered the sights and still overshot. The third time Mr. goat came rolling down the steep cliff. I had to hire two men to cross the river on a rope bridge, there being a single bamboo cable, cross a very wild and rough sheep country to the goat and bring the goat to me. This delayed us so that we reached the tavern after dark. The goat is gray and weighed 48 lbs.

Made a long, hard trip of 90 li to ~~Monchow~~. It must have been thirty miles, but doing so saves one day of travel that we can use in collecting. We will make eight stages in seven days. Two birds that the skinners did not finish last night spoiled on account of the heat. We reached Monchow at dark to find all the inns full of people. After a long time we found lodgings. A very late supper. The country on the lower levels, near the road, is semi-arid and has few insects excepting wasps and bees and very few birds.

Birdskins no 390-392 dinner ate five Chinese biscuits, 2 eggs, and some salt.

Travelled sixty li. A dry, arid district, with few insects and birds. A strong wind made it harder to secure insects. The snails below Monchow are quite interesting. Monchow is a little over 100 miles from Songpan, 360 li, 400 li from Chengtu or about 130 miles foreign. I have walked every step of the way since leaving Lehengtu.

Sick during the night. In the morning felt very weak and tried to vomit. Mr. Gorringe kindly let me ride his horse 20 li. This rested me up. Then walked to a little a canyon to an aborigine settlement. One the way we carried fell off the bridge into the smaller stream and was drowned. My rifle, the Smithsonian tube and folding chair, and my folding bed were lost. Could find no trace of man or things allowed to stay in the joshua tree which is really a stone fortress. P.M. Rained. Secured ten birds. Eleven men searched the river all day and found the tents and the drowned coolie's trousses. Secured a few good insects. No trace of the drowned man or the other things. The lost rifle could better be spared from the collecting outfit than any other one we have. The loss of the Newton high-power rifle or a shotgun would have been serious. Birds no 398 - 407. Aborigine hunters tried hard to get a deer or a mountain goat, but failed. We have decided to cut out that expense and secure any mammals we can by our own efforts and without their aid. Secured eight birds. There are many odd birds here but they are hard to get because of the dense thickets.

I have not been able to secure fruit to eat. Bought some honey that looks like black water but tastes a little sweet. Can buy no milk here. Secured a lot of interesting flies, not seeing well, but kept at work. Dead man's body found.

Suiju	April 14	one specimen with yellow above the tail, new to my collecting. also one very small bird that was poorly skinned. The other birds killed were all common. There are several kinds of small birds which I will probably not send specimens of in the future, since the Smithsonian Institution probably has all it wants.
		The hawk which caught about April 12th is not uncommon in Szechuan. I have put it in a shoeblacking box, tin, for safety.
		May first, I started on a trip south of Suiju. I was in charge of my colle. the box containing arsenic with instructions to send it along. He did not do so, and I did not find this out for several days, until the arsenic ran out. I had to purchase Chinese arsenic, which may be of inferior quality and I fear the skins caught on that trip never reach the Smithsonian Institution in a damaged condition.

June 1st June 2nd found the nest of an ant that I had been unable to find a nest of before with eggs & I did not find any winged ants, but found eggs. These ants have a bad sting that one does not care to experience a second time. They are black ants, and the specimens are in a small bottle.

July 1st I saw a lot of birds of the kind mentioned in my 2nd on a island, wounded one but it flew. They flew and we could not get it.

		July 3 took my first picture with the Smithsonian Kodak. It was of four people, one Chinese and three aborigines, a Rong, a Shiang, and a Lelian Miao.
		On this day I probably ate my last meal in a white man's home until my return from Japan.
		I took no coffee, tea, candy (except some chocolate), candies, cake or the like with me, expecting to "live off the land" a good deal. I rode no horse and took no sedan chair, planning to cut expenses by footinig it as much as possible.

STATION.	DATE.	TEXT.	ATTENDANCE. MEN. WOMEN. CH'DREN.
		On this trip I had to practically run a dispensary every day to keep the cooks and helpers in condition.
		July 4th - This was certainly a day ending in a nightmare, and one not familiar with things Chinese would have been up against it. My helper that was constantly making trouble with his tongue almost raised a riot by unwise words, which might have resulted in roughnecks stealing our guns while my men were unprotected on the streets.

My visit to the magistrate straightened things out for several days to come. A generous present to this official counted not a little in settling all these difficult matters. Such is life in west China, and such is collecting here, but I am very glad to do it.—

in fact, I like to.

I had sent word to the cutter, Ho to meet me at Leheight but he did not do so, so I will have him not around Kuan Shien and Bek Luk Lin where there are many insects I have not yet caught.
Diry the coolie who rows so much leaves me short two collectors, but I'll aim to make up for it by using natives in the interior.

This morning I broke the best glasses I brought along with me, I left them on the table. Probably a rat knocked them off onto the ground, and I stepped on them when I got up this morning.

My feet got sore today but there are no blisters so they will be all right tomorrow.

I left safely put away at home
in Suiju most of the traps,
the newest double barreled shotgun, fully half the collecting outfit, and most of the ammunition.
This was 1, to save expenses on this trip everywhere possible
2, so that even if the whole outfit I have with me were lost, I would be able to go right on collecting. I also left the automatic 22 rifle
at home, bringing another higher power small rifle of my own instead.

We start every day at daybreak and sometimes are up until eleven o'clock or later at night taking care of specimens. This means that we generally get too little sleep while travelling.

July 7 the Government boat I bailed up, my boat was not till very late so all were very tired today. In addition we had a long hard journey over rough roads. The country was dense and with few specimens. The fine spirit of my Chinese helpers is a great comfort the work here is arduous and do not in plain. One of these days we must take long and our supplies will shorten and the third go to nothing. When number four is on a long scale in China I will return I am further along now He is a fine boy and we and I go on the

We have a good opportunity to make a small profit as we could go west 20 miles of Lhasa we would find the Tibetans help themselves and the Hep Shui Bot tsai aborigines and the tribes will not permit us to travel in these directions. We have not only enquired but have actually come in every direction before being convinced that this is a poor place for mammals and large birds.

we have found only two birds of game or pheasant-like besides the unpublished Lophura (pheasant). It is black, or at least dark, and lies in the dense woods, and is very wild. We secured one good specimen and killed a second. The latter fell from the top of a tall fir tree on a steep muddy incline. It rolled a long way down the mountain, and when we found it, there were not enough feathers left on the body to make it of any use as a specimen. The trees and higher leaves, twigs, and logs are being rapidly covered up. The mineral substance when deposited becomes a bright yellow stone so that the bed of the stream is a bright yellow color. The water flows slowest at the edge of the stream and there deposits its mineral so that it tends to build banks to the stream. In many places the stream is from five to thirty feet above the surrounding ground & rocks and the lower elevations are generally old beds of the stream that have been deserted. Probably the stream builds itself higher and higher above the neighboring soil or rock until, in some freshet, it breaks over its banks and subsides the lower level which is for a time the stream bed, and which is gradually built up by the mineral deposit until in turn it is higher than the last bed that it has left. I am sending samples of the yellow stone some with leaf or twig imprints. (See page 265)

do they simply seek different levels?			insects above 7500 feet often are found under stones but not often in the lower levels in Szechuan. Evidently they find under the stones some protection from the cold.
I did not find the wild small reddish turtle dove that I found at Datserlin.			The escorts are a great problem. without them the officials will not be responsible for your safety. If you pay them too little, they report to the magistrate. sometimes they report that you have not paid what you should when you have. To get the officials to give them more money, but it hurts your reputation.

There is more roughing it on this trip for me than on any previous trip. I have walked every step since leaving Lhengtu. I probably will not see another foreigner until return to Lhengtu. I have not eaten cake since leaving Lhengtu and the only cookies I have had were some fresh Japanese cookies bought on the street. I eat bread only about one meal a day - can't get any here that is less tough than leather (it is unleavened). It takes me till late at night sometimes to take care of the specimens caught during the day.

STATIONS VISITED.

My Chinese helpers have worked mighty hard on this trip. It is hard on the Chinese to walk 20 to 30 miles, then spend part of the night skinning birds. The netter often does not get enough sleep because of catching moths. All these helpers walk all the time unless they are sick. The loyalty of these Chinese helpers and the willingness to work hard will mean much in making this trip a success if it proves a success. All these helpers I have trained myself.

In the region of Songpan and Monchow, and between, all the rock is lava = no limestone or sandstone - excepting the yellow stone deposited by the water in Yellow Dragon Gorge.

Ants. - Above Monchow at a level of about 6000 feet I saw both the large red ant and the large black ant on the same ground. They did not seem to be at war. ~~of his makes~~ it seems probable to me that they do not fight but simply ~~and~~ naturally subs. different levels.

Aug 7. I was sick this morning and still feel weak.

The drowning of the coolie carrier was unavoidable. The stream was swift and swollen. The bridge was three logs tied together with pieces of vine, probably. These were rotten and gave way when the carrier tried to cross. I heard his cry for help, saw him floating rapidly down the sneller mountain stream. This was just above the village. We ran below the village and tried to head him off, but the only thing we found was a piece of the framework he used for carrying things on his back.

This marks a sad ending for the day. No trace has been found of our things. These mountain streams can only be appreciated after one has seen them. Many of them are roaring torrents especially in high water. The coolie had parents, wife, and children. I had healed his feet of bad stro bruises and we bled each other. The wasi aborigines have been brought to this territory by the lehines from towards Tibet and placed ~~so as to check~~ in the midst of the lehians to balance the power of the lehians and make them more easily governed. They have absorbed more of the social and religious customs of the lehines than the lehians, who have refused to absorb or be absorbed, and resemble the lehines more closely.

Aug 5. The accident yesterday was entirely unavoidable on our part. The blame is entirely on the part of those who look after that bridge for not replacing rotten things.

The pieces of skull and the jaws secured above Nen Lehuan are probably of two individuals. Mr. Torrence, Dr. B. S. thinks they are of the Sui Dynasty, at least one thousand years old. He thinks they were mummified. The skin and flesh did not rot but dried on the bodies. Mr. Torrence sent a specimen of a hand to the British Museum. This is a very dry spot, and either they were mummified or else they dried up instead of rotting.

The copies, well preserved, are of wood. There is no mark or inscription of any kind to indicate the age of the specimens. The bodies were intact when first discovered several years ago but the natives have broken them to pieces with stones, ironed like to know what Dr. Reddick finds about these bones. Are they mongolian, aryan, or aboriginal in type?

Mammals I do not consider my summer's catch of mammals an outstanding success. Near Songpan we were not allowed to go where mammals were plentiful, where we went a great festival which had included hunting had driven the large mammals away, and nearly cleaned out the pheasants. Near Nen Lehuan there are large mammals, including a white and a black bear, and a long-haired monkey or ape, but every native is a hunter and the animals are exceedingly wild. I used to trap when a boy, but there are special things to learn about trapping.

West China, and I am beginning to learn some of them. It might pay for me to train a native trapper and hire him throughout the year, taking him with me on these trips, for trapping takes time, and one of my problems is to get as much as possible done in a comparatively short time. If allowed to use money a little liberally I can hire native hunters and considerably increase my catch of large mammals.

Aug 15, I was just getting into the swing by securing mammals when I left for Suiyuan. A month spent here in winter time ought to give excellent results.

LI TRAV-ELLED.	FORM OF CONVEYANCE.	PERSONAL EXPENSE.	MISSION EXPENSE.	TOTAL.	AVERAGE COST TO MISSION PER DAY
Wilson, the great naturalist who spent eleven years in West China had with him part of the time a naturalist who spent his whole time trapping mammals. People who knew him say that he had a great deal of trouble and lost lots of traps. The Chinese would continually steal his traps. He was constantly provoked by this sort of thing. Some of us who live in China and sometimes failing to think that "most from China man" is a literary fiction, more legendary than real.

It will be some relief of mind when I get to Suiju with my collecting outfit and specimens. Brigands, both thieves and rust, baggage by carriers, and wreckage of boats are some of the possible sources of loss. Last night a thief broke into a foreign compound in Kaiting, probably hoping that he might secure the Smithsonian guns which I had taken to the house where I spent the night.

REMARKS.

After losing my folding cot when the coolie was drowned at sea near Lehuan, I spread my blankets on flat boards. It would not do to use Chinese beds, on account of the fleas, bedbugs and lice.

It is about as much work caring for the specimens, labelling them, packing them &c as it is to collect the specimens. Under caring for the specimens I would include drying, wrapping, &c.

It was a wise thing to take the Songpan trip. It might be several years before that road is again as free from brigands as it is this year, and before the trip is again possible because there is no civil war in Szechuan. Now that the mission has asked me to go to Ningyuanfu next spring it is certain that I could not go to Songpan next year, although I could go to Morpin, probably. The Washan trip could be taken practically any year so that it may well be postponed until the other important trips are all taken. Washan is so near Mt. Omei that there is apt to be quite a close resemblance in the species found at Washan and those at Mt. Omei. Places more widely separated are more apt to produce a different variety of specimens.

Sept. 18th	Already the warclouds are gathering over China, and there are rumors that the thunders of war will soon be heard in Szechuan. If there had been similar conditions during the summer I could not have gone to Songpan. I have hurried up the packing and shipping of specimens, and today the last bag of specimens has gone off by parcel post. Here's hoping that they all get safely out of China before the Yangtze River becomes closed to steamer traffic, and that none of the fifty boxes of specimens are lost or injured.
